

El Gaucho Hospitality Launches an Etiquette Revolution

Seattle, WA -December 18, 2015 - While our digital contacts are increasing, our quality connections with other human beings seem to be doing the opposite. The decrease in human relations has, unfortunately, brought with it the demise of some of our “manners.” Through this cultural shift, and over a span of just a few generations, we seem to have lost a bit of our polish.

El Gaucho Hospitality is happy to announce that we are taking on an “etiquette revolution.” We hope to provide inspiration and techniques to bring back some of the refinement of prior generations, updated for today’s fast-paced lives.

Cortney Anderson-Sanford is an etiquette expert and is leading scheduled and private classes in our restaurants in Seattle, Portland, Tacoma and Bellevue. We are also working with Seattle-based PayScale Inc., the world's leading provider of on-demand compensation data and software, on a series of blog posts and videos for those who are unable to attend a class.

Whether guests would like a team building experience for a group or company, or personally want a brush-up, sessions can be personally tailored. Scheduled lunch classes are 90 minutes and $150/person inclusive. Cortney will lead a 3-course lunch, including wine, and teach etiquette tips throughout each course. Classes are very interactive and fun. Participants will leave with a pamphlet recapping tips covered.
